Foreword

In about 1996 I was at a yard sale in Riverview, Florida. I was looking through some boxes of books and I found four little composition books. I was really attracted to one especially because there was a very old fashioned little girl on the front.

I bought the books and I think I might have paid $1.00 for all four of them.

I have looked at them over the years but never seriously.

I got them out a few weeks ago and thought of maybe putting them on Ebay and selling them.

That is when I decided to read through them. I love Genealogy and after reading them I knew I had to know more about this girl and her life and family.

They belonged to Annie Sanderson. I had no idea where Annie Sanderson lived or anything about her except the books told me she had attended a school, probably a college, and she was a piano teacher.

She had written the books in her own handwriting and one of the dates were October 4, 1887. She had kept writing in the books for several years.

I decided to check Ancestry.com and see if I could find her and her family.

There were clues in the book. She had named some of her students. She also mentioned merchants in the town she lived in.

I finally found her. She had lived in a town called Vaiden, Ms.

I then looked for more information about Vaiden and I found a wonderful web site that was created by a man named Ron Collins. The web site is:

<http://www..vaiden.net>

He has a beautiful web site. There is so much information there about Vaiden. He has pictures and stories about some of the people.

I contacted him and asked if he might be able to tell me someone who might be interested in having these books or maybe just getting them back to the Vaiden area where some of the descendants of Annie's students might still live.

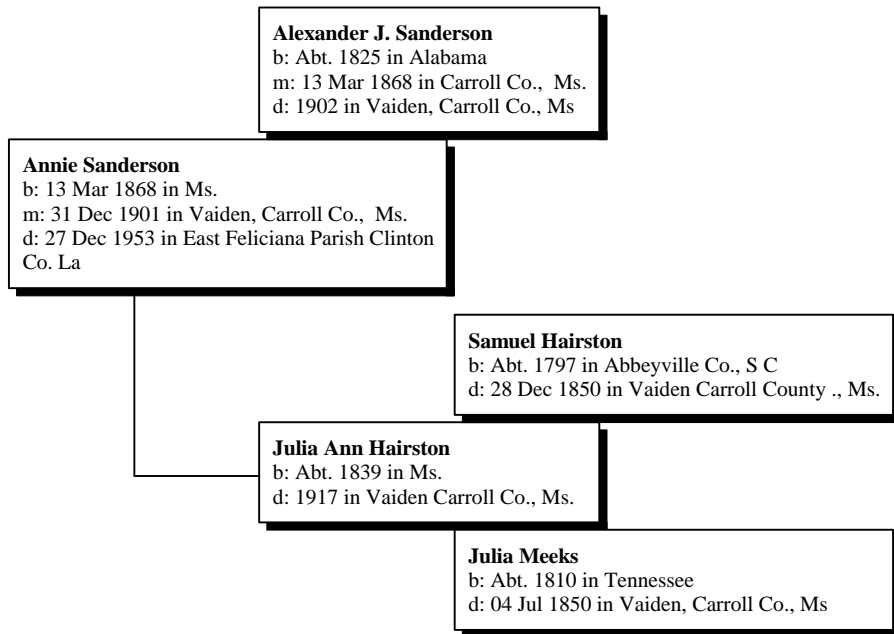

He gave me the phone number of Mrs. Frances "Bud" Welch. I called and spoke with her. She was very helpful. I decided then to send the books to her and let her decide whether to place them in the Vaiden Library Genealogy Department or maybe send them to the Mississippi Archives.

I would like to thank Mrs. Bud Welch and Mr. Ron Collins for sharing their Vaiden, Mississippi with me. I also want to thank a Genealogy buddy who helped me, Sandy Graley. Sandy lives in the mountains of WV.

It is my sincere hope that people who look at these journals will enjoy knowing and learning about Annie

Sanderson and her family and her students as much as I have enjoyed getting to know her.

Generation No. 1

1. Annie Sanderson, born 13 Mar 1868 in Ms.; died 27 Dec 1953 in East Feliciana Parish Clinton Co. La. She was the daughter of 2. Alexander J. Sanderson and 3. Julia Ann Hairston. She married (1) Charles Kilbourne 31 Dec 1901 in Vaiden, Carroll Co., Ms.. He was born 1856, and died 1937 in East Feliciana Parish Clinton La.. He was the son of J G Kilbourne and Ada.

Notes for Annie Sanderson:

I have an email from Mary Morris who did a lookup for me in the East Feliciana Parish Cemetery book she sent the following information.

Charles Kilbourn--1856-1937 & Annie S Kilbourne 1968-1953 buried in Kilbourne Cemetery in Clinton, La. near the Richard Kilbourne home west of Clinton.

Another source says that Annie was born March 13, 1868 and she died Dec 27, 1953 in East Feliciana Parish La.

(an article that Annie Sanderson Kilbourne wrote)

From War Times In and Around Clinton, La. by Annie Sanderson Kilbourne, Clinton, La. (Louisiana Historical Quarterly, Vol. 13, No. 1, January, 1930):

Why is there such a glamour over distant battle grounds? It is generally considered a rare privilege to be able to visit such historic spots, and one feels almost as if one were treading on holy ground. The scenes of strife, in many instances, are in foreign fields, the participants known to us, solely, through mazy history, and the casus belli anything but a laudable one, yet, we experience a sensation of awe and reverence. It is incomprehensible, in the face of the knowledge that we, of Clinton, Louisiana, walk, ride, or drive, almost daily, over soil hallowed by the blood of our own countrymen, yea, of our own relatives, mayhap patriotic blood shed in defense of our loved Southland. Why is it, that we experience no thrill, inspiration of reverence, from contact with these historic places? No great battles were fought here it is true, but the combatants were actuated by the same patriotic ardor and spirit as well as those of Shiloh and Gettysburg all fought for the same noble cause. Possibly, it is, because we, of a later generation, are not sufficiently informed in regard to the points of special interest. They are in our midst, however, if we would only seek them.

The old Confederate camp was at the northern limit of what is now Church Street on the vacant lots opposite Mr. Jno. A. White's residence. The scenes of strife were on the southern and southwestern outskirts of the town, mainly. In August, 1862, Gen. Lee [Union] and Col. Scott had an encounter at the Cross Roads, on the Baton Rouge Road, in sight of the old Monahan house. Gen. Lee was in command of two thousand Union soldiers, some of whom were convicts from the Baton Rouge Penitentiary. Col. Scott had about five hundred men at his command. Under such circumstances, it was not surprising that Gen. Lee should be victorious. The Monahan house was saved from destruction by a masonic sign made by the lady of the house, and recognized and respected by the officer in command of the enemy. Gen. Lee pushed on to Clinton, where he spent two days and nights. As a result of his visit, the depot was destroyed, and also the factory building which was in process of erection on Liberty St., near the Fair Grounds. Much private property was destroyed, and the seal and regalia were stolen from the Masonic Hall. Lee then retired to Baton Rouge.

Port Hudson surrendered in July, 1863, after which stragglers were constantly passing through Clinton. Grierson's raid followed in August of the same year. Col. Fred Ogden was in command of the Confederate forces, and the scene of their engagement was on the Jackson Road just beyond Pretty Creek, in what is known as the Gurney Field. Previous to their encounter, a Methodist Devine and his small nephew, driving a team, composed of a fine Kentucky horse and a small sorrel pony, passed over that road. When about two miles out they met a detachment of the enemy. The latter were delighted with the horse, and, declaring that a sorrel pony that one of their company was riding would make an excellent match for the pony driven by the Minister, proceeded to exchange it for the horse, despite the protests and pleadings of the reverend gentleman. Their commanding officer, Col. French, appeared very opportunely and restored the horse to his rightful owner. The minister and his small companion were then allowed to pursue their journey in peace. The Union soldiers were repulsed on that occasion, and they did not succeed in crossing the creek to the town. However, the old house, west of the creek, now owned by the Kilbournes, and several buildings in Clinton, still bear the marks of their shot and shell. Skirmishing continued from that time until the close of the war.

The hospitable home of the patriotic Richerts near the Methodist Church was the refuge of many weary, footsore and well-nigh starved soldiers during that stormy period. Silliman Institute and the old Masonic Hall were used as hospitals in those days. It is difficult to imagine our reposeful little town of Clinton in the throes of terror and blood shed. In striking contrast to its present calm, was the reveille in the early dawn, and the recurrent intervals of warfare with their rattle of musketry punctuated by the boom of the cannon. The only warfare now waged at the Cross Roads is of a mercantile and agricultural character and the only fusillade of firearms now heard in the Gurney field is aimed at the inoffensive snipe that feed on its marshes. Day-dawn is no longer announced by the warlike reveille, but by the more peaceful, though shriller call to work of the factories.

At Silliman Institute, instead of the groans of the wounded and dying, is heard the hum of study and the merry laughter of charming girlhood. The old, ivy-draped Masonic Hall, once hospital, then academy, and later a factory, has been turned over to the mice and bats, and its silence is undisturbed, unless perchance, the ghost of a departed soldier haunts its empty chambers, and awakes faint echoes during the solemn midnight hours.

Notes for Sammie Sanderson:

1900 Census of Richmond, Madison Co., Ky.

There is a Sammie Sanderson in the 1900 Census of Madison Co., KY. All info for him fits our Sammie, exactly. This Sammie is a student at Central University, age 29, born June 1870. He and his parents were born in MS. This is not conclusive proof that both Sammies are one and the same, but it looks as if they could be.

(Note)

I believe that Sammie might have died between 1900 and 1910. I cannot find him on any of the Census. His Mother Julia stated on the 1900 Census that she had given birth to 12 children and 7 were living. Later on one of the later Census she said that she had given birth to 12 children and only 5 were living. Julia died in 1901.

I can find Annie, David, Agnes, Sadie, and Madge/Maggie on the 1910, 1920, and 1930 Census.

- iv. Agnes Sanderson, born 1873 in Ms; married John F Dinkins.

Notes for Agnes Sanderson:

I believe that the information contained in this Census about Agnes Sanderson and her sister Maggie Sanderson indicate that they were students at a school and were living as boarders while attending the school. (Note all students are female). I do not at this time know the relationship between Jasper Sanderson and Maggie and Sadie Sanderson, if they were relatives or not.

The Vaiden Artillery, Captain Bains, added to the regiment as Company L, was on duty throughout the siege, part of the company in the center batteries on the river under Major Ogden and Col. Ed. Higgins, and one section under Lieut. Elbert M. Collins with General Lee on the land line. General Lee gave special mention in his report to Lieutenants Duncan (E) and Collins (L). Lieut. A. J. Sanderson commanded a 10-pounder rifled gun, Lieut. E. L. Wood 12-pounder, and Lieut. J. S. Young was killed in command of a 12-pounder howitzer, with Cumming's Brigade. Tablets 212, 214, 215.

I have an email from Mary Morris who did a lookup for me in the East Feliciana Parish Cemetery book she sent the following information.

Charles Kilbourn--1856-1937 & Annie S Kilbourne 1968-1953 buried in Kilbourne Cemetery in Clinton, La. near the Richard Kilbourne home west of Clinton.

Another source says that Annie was born March 13, 1868 and she died Dec 27, 1953 in East Feliciana Parish La.

(an article that Annie Sanderson Kilbourne wrote)

From War Times In and Around Clinton, La. by Annie Sanderson Kilbourne, Clinton, La. (Louisiana Historical Quarterly, Vol. 13, No. 1, January, 1930):

Why is there such a glamour over distant battle grounds? It is generally considered a rare privilege to be able to visit such historic spots, and one feels almost as if one were treading on holy ground. The scenes of strife, in many instances, are in foreign fields, the participants known to us, solely, through mazy history, and the casus belli anything but a laudable one, yet, we experience a sensation of awe and reverence. It is incomprehensible, in the face of the knowledge that we, of Clinton, Louisiana, walk, ride, or drive, almost daily, over soil hallowed by the blood of our own countrymen, yea, of our own relatives, mayhap patriotic blood shed in defense of our loved Southland. Why is it, that we experience no thrill, inspiration of reverence, from contact with these historic places? No great battles were fought here it is true, but the combatants were actuated by the same patriotic ardor and spirit as well as those of Shiloh and Gettysburg all fought for the same noble cause. Possibly, it is, because we, of a later generation, are not sufficiently informed in regard to the points of special interest. They are in our midst, however, if we would only seek them.

The old Confederate camp was at the northern limit of what is now Church Street on the vacant lots opposite Mr. Jno. A. White's residence. The scenes of strife were on the southern and southwestern outskirts of the town, mainly. In August, 1862, Gen. Lee [Union] and Col. Scott had an encounter at the Cross Roads, on the Baton Rouge Road, in sight of the old Monahan house. Gen. Lee was in command of two thousand Union soldiers, some of whom were convicts from the Baton Rouge Penitentiary. Col. Scott had about five hundred men at his command. Under such circumstances, it was not surprising that Gen. Lee should be victorious. The Monahan house was saved from destruction by a masonic sign made by the lady of the house, and recognized and respected by the officer in command of the enemy. Gen. Lee pushed on to Clinton, where he spent two days and nights. As a result of his visit, the depot was destroyed, and also the factory building which was in process of erection on Liberty St., near the Fair Grounds. Much private property was destroyed, and the seal and regalia were stolen from the Masonic Hall. Lee then retired to Baton Rouge.

Port Hudson surrendered in July, 1863, after which stragglers were constantly passing through Clinton. Grierson's raid followed in August of the same year. Col. Fred Ogden was in command of the Confederate forces, and the scene of their engagement was on the Jackson Road just beyond Pretty Creek, in what is known as the Gurney Field. Previous to their encounter, a Methodist Devine and his small nephew, driving a team, composed of a fine Kentucky horse and a small sorrel pony, passed over that road. When about two miles out they met a detachment of the enemy. The latter were delighted with the horse, and, declaring that a sorrel pony that one of their company was riding would make an excellent match for the pony driven by the Minister, proceeded to exchange it for the horse, despite the protests and pleadings of the reverend gentleman. Their commanding officer, Col. French, appeared very opportunely and restored the horse to his rightful owner. The minister and his small companion were then allowed to pursue their journey in peace. The Union soldiers were repulsed on that occasion, and they did not succeed in crossing the creek to the town. However, the old house, west of the creek, now owned by the Kilbournes, and several buildings in Clinton, still bear the marks of their shot and shell. Skirmishing continued from that time until the close of the war.

The hospitable home of the patriotic Richerts near the Methodist Church was the refuge of many weary, footsore and well-nigh starved soldiers during that stormy period. Silliman Institute and the old Masonic Hall were used as hospitals in those days. It is difficult to imagine our reposeful little town of Clinton in the throes of terror and blood shed. In striking contrast to its present calm, was the reveille in the early dawn, and the recurrent intervals of warfare with their rattle of musketry punctuated by the boom of the cannon. The only warfare now waged at the Cross Roads is of a mercantile and agricultural character and the only fusillade of firearms now heard in the Gurney field is aimed at the inoffensive snipe that feed on its marshes. Day-dawn is no longer announced by the warlike reveille, but by the more peaceful, though shriller call to work of the factories.

At Silliman Institute, instead of the groans of the wounded and dying, is heard the hum of study and the merry laughter of charming girlhood. The old, ivy-draped Masonic Hall, once hospital, then academy, and later a factory, has been turned over to the mice and bats, and its silence is undisturbed, unless perchance, the ghost of a departed soldier haunts its empty chambers, and awakes faint echoes during the solemn midnight hours.

1900 Census of Richmond, Madison Co., Ky.

There is a Sammie Sanderson in the 1900 Census of Madison Co., KY. All info for him fits our Sammie, exactly.

This Sammie is a student at Central University, age 29, born June 1870. He and his parents were born in MS.

This is not conclusive proof that both Sammies are one and the same, but it looks as if they could be.

(Note)

I believe that Sammie might have died between 1900 and 1910. I cannot find him on any of the Census.

His Mother Julia stated on the 1900 Census that she had given birth to 12 children and 7 were living. Later on one of the later Census she said that she had given birth to 12 children and only 5 were living.

Julia died in 1901.

I can find Annie, David, Agnes, Sadie, and Madge/Maggie on the 1910, 1920, and 1930 Census.

I believe that the information contained in this Census about Agnes Sanderson and her sister Maggie Sanderson indicate that they were students at a school and were living as boarders while attending the school. (Note all students are female). I do not at this time know the relationship between Jasper Sanderson and Maggie and Sadie Sanderson, if they were relatives or not.
